The RSH Group to provide Business Retention Services for Oregon Economic Development Group

Salem, OR—March 18, 2010 – Erik Andersson, President of the Oregon Economic Development Association (OEDA), a statewide association of city and county economic development organizations, announced today that OEDA has included the ability to conduct engineering based cost segregation studies for its members as a part of the inclusive array of economic development services offered to developers, businesses, and government. These services support the efforts of developers and industry to grow the Oregon economy, create more good paying jobs, and educate the public and government officials on the benefits of a strong economic development policy.

“The addition of these cost segregation services allows our members to help existing companies in their communities strengthen their bottom line.” Erik explained. “OEDA’s economic development programs are not just about attracting new business, they’re also focused on assisting our current business partners to thrive and grow in Oregon’s diversifying and expanding economy.”

For more information about cost segregation or any of the OEDA business programs, look at the OEDA website www.oeda.biz or contact John Schuetz at 949-305-7290 or jschuetz@thershgroup.com.
